“ I'm sorry for your loss, but also share in your joy of knowing where your father is. I kept waiting for the burden of grief to hit me when my father transitioned three years ago, but it never really did. He had lived a full life and loved Jesus so much, just like your dad. So it was hard to be sad. I think of him and smile, knowing what life is like for him now. My husband's death was not so easy though. I know where he is too, but I still miss him so much!

I only met your dad once, but remember him to be such a kind person. Love you.

I will never forget how giving and kind he was. I remember a man who would open up his home and serve and welcome others. As a teenager I remember him always being so laid back and thoughtful. He was a giving and a kind soul. I look forward to seeing him again one day.
